From the Family Guy

Family Director Marc Bollon

Dear Brother Knights,

As the Family Director, I hope to start writing a monthly blurb on different topics regarding family. I was thinking about what I might talk about last week and had something prepared, but due to the weather, didn't have the opportunity to pass it on. So here it is.

I have been thinking lately of how I can improve my relationship with my kids. As most of us do, I work all day during the week and by the time I get home, I only have a couple of hours with the children before they go to bed. I am fortunate that during these first few years of their lives, my wife has been able to stay home so my children, ages four and six, have at least one of us there during the day. I know that not everyone is that fortunate.

One thing that I feel has deepened my relationship with my daughter and strengthened my appreciation for all children is volunteering at her school. My daughter goes to SEAS and they allow parents to volunteer to help in the lunch room so the teachers can eat somewhat in peace. You basically monitor the room and if a child needs help opening something they raise their hand and you help them. It gets noisy, but it isn't that much work. I hear a lot of teachers and parents complain about how much work it is, but quite frankly, it isn't. It is one of the most important things adults can do is being good role models to children.

I get two things from doing this. Number one, I am able to serve our community and our faith by helping be a good role model to our most precious church members, our children. The children look to us for guidance and by volunteering, they see our example.

The second thing of course is seeing how excited my daughter is to see me and also getting to witness how my daughter interacts with her friends. Seeing my daughter in different environments helps me become closer to her. Seeing her talk, laugh, and behave gives me a deeper appreciation of who she is becoming.

Most schools allow parents to go eat lunch with their children and even volunteer to help out. The term "milk mom" or "lunch mom" shouldn't discourage fathers from volunteering as well. I have Mondays off so am able to volunteer without it affecting my work schedule. I encourage all of you fathers (and maybe even grandfathers depending on school policy) of young children to do this if you can. Take a long lunch break if necessary. I'm sure at some age, your child will feel it isn't "cool" for you to volunteer, but until then, get as many opportunities in as you can.

I hope you all have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. There are many family friendly events coming up and I hope that each of your families will be safe and together. Let us keep those families that have lost loved ones or who will not be together for the holidays in our thoughts and prayers. And most importantly, let us remember the true reason for the season.

Warm Regards,

Marc Bollon
Family Director
